	coolant is coming in that may require new pipes—should we alert owners so they can change ahead of that if they wish? After that, their costs will be much higher. After discussion at the board meeting, it was agreed that the condo management company would inform the owners of this upcoming change and the possible impact on them.  • mandatory back flow valves? According to the Condo manager, these are only required if we had a common laundry room or boiler.  • address for service – corporation registration and reporting. The Condo Manager confirmed that this is up to date with the appropriate authorities.  • do we need a "hazardous materials" document for contractors (asbestos, lead paint)?—According to the Condo Manager, the only document needed for our building are MSDS (Material Safety Data Sheets) for the cleaning supplies and the paint in the storage area. She is working on that so we would meet the WHIMS requirements.  • alerted condo manager about oil leaking from vehicle parked in #8 in the garage  • Connected with a group of condo boards who have heritage and other significantly older buildings so we can work together on common issues.  • provided a parking pass for the visitor parking spot for use by the building cleaner  • left a notice on a blue Honda that has been parked for days at a time in the visitor parking spot without moving (as seen by the snow cover): Ontario BVVH 890  • discussed a number of issues with a number of owners  • removed a lot of garbage and dog stool from the front garden—ongoing issues
Treasurer's Report	-Tracy went to the ORT meeting (owners round table) some notes below from the meeting: -lobby and landscaping committees -communication and transparency is very important and that they know where things are at before it happensAlso the ORT would like advance notice for when major things happen (i.e., elevator repairs etc.)pooling resources of good contractors within' units.	•	CM will send Susan in 310 the dimensions and garden design
